

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

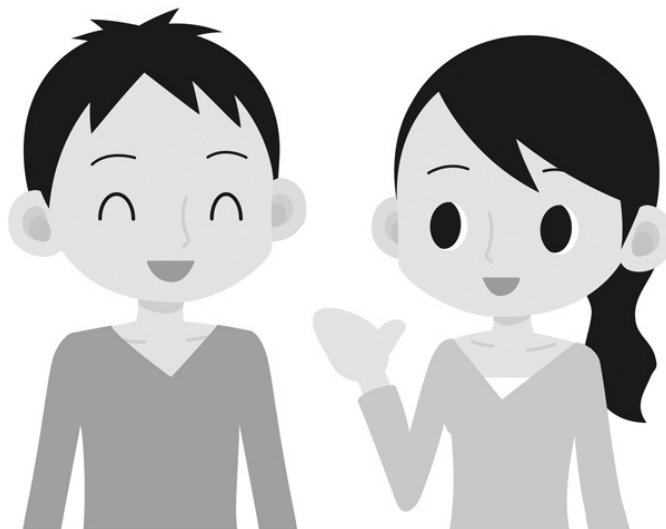

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Can you tell me a little about yourself?

Learning Outcome

Describe ways of solving problems and getting things done in work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- When you meet someone for the first time, what is the first thing that you notice?
- If you were conducting an interview, what questions would you ask?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about events and experiences related to jobs.
- I can talk about facts and courses of actions.
- I can participate in interviews.

Let's Explore!

There is a lot of stress at this job.

* "Stress" means mental or emotional strain or tension from very demanding circumstances.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Boris: Proceeding with our interview, I have a few more questions I would like to ask you.
- Kristi: Absolutely.
- Boris: What is your greatest strength?
- Kristi: My writing skills. Having interned as a copy editor for the last two years, I have strong attention to detail when it comes to writing. I have also written for several publications, so I'm able to shape my writing style to suit my task and audience.
- Boris: What is your greatest weakness?
- Kristi: Organization has never been my strongest point. But I implemented a time management system that really helped my organizational skills.
- Boris: And how do you handle stress?
- Kristi: That's a good question. I actually work better under pressure and have found I enjoy working in a challenging environment. As a social media writer and editor, I thrived under quick deadlines and multiple projects.
- Boris: Great. I only have two more questions for you. Why do you think you are the right person for this job?
- Kristi: I want this job because it seems tailored to my competencies, which include writing and editing. I understand that this company is on the way up. The website says the launch of several new books is imminent. I want to be part of this company as it grows.
- Boris: This is the last question, Ms. Lenard. What are your salary expectations?
- Kristi: My salary expectations are in line with my experience and qualifications.
- Boris: I think I have asked you everything. Thank you for coming in.
- Kristi: Thank you for interviewing me.

Let's Practice!

Why do you want to work for this company?

Instructions: Proofread the sentences. Correct the mistake. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

1. The website says the launch of several new books is imitate.
2. I have strong attention to detail when it comes to my writing.
3. I strife under quick deadlines and multiple projects.
4. The website says the laugh of several new books is imminent.
5. What are your celery expectations?

Let's Practice!

What I think the answer is ...

Instructions: Read the sentences. Classify the sentences into the correct category. Write C for Correct Sentences and I for Incorrect Sentences. Correct the incorrect sentences.

1. ____ What are expecting salary?
2. ____ What I want paid in line with my experience and qualifications.
3. ____ What I wanting is to be paid in line with my experience and qualifications.
4. ____ We do here is often very stressful.
5. ____ What I think is my greatest strength is my writing skills.
6. ____ What I want is a job that is tailored to my competencies and which includes writing and editing.

Corrected Sentences

Extension Activity

Conducting an interview!

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- With a partner, create a job you need to fill.
- Make a list of all the skills you want applicants to have.
- Include descriptions of job duties using passive modals to explain.
- Make a list of questions you would like to ask.
- You will interview various classmates for the position.
- One of you will ask the questions, the other person will take note of the subject's body language.
- Afterwards, give feedback on how the subject did.
- Interview the next candidate and switch roles with your partner.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I make a list of skills needed for a particular job listing.

☐
☐

I use passive modals to explain job duties.

☐
☐

I practice interviewing questions.

☐
☐

I analyze body language.

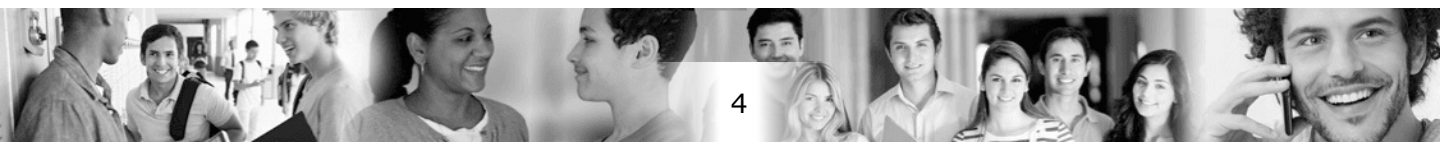

☐
☐

I give feedback on how to interview for a job.

☐
☐

Target Words

- imminent (adjective): happening very soon
e.g. The website says the launch of several new books is imminent.
- attention to detail (expression): noticing small, specific things
e.g. I have strong attention to detail when it comes to my writing.
- thrive (verb): to do well
e.g. I thrived under quick deadlines and multiple projects.
- launch (verb): to start up
e.g. The website says the launch of several new books is imminent.
- salary (noun): a fixed regular payment for work
e.g. What are your salary expectations?

Learning Points

Causative Get and Have

We use a causative verb when we want to talk about something that someone else did for us. It means that the subject caused the action to happen, but didn't do it themselves.

You use the causative verbs get/have when you want to make it clear that the subject paid, asked, or persuaded the other person to do something.

Sometimes, you use get when you want to convey the feeling that you need to convince someone to do something. Have is a little more neutral.

	Structure	Example	Meaning
Get	[get + person + to + verb]	My boss got her to work late on Tuesday. Did the boss get you to work on Saturday?	to convince to do something or to trick someone into doing something
	[get + object + past participle]	I got my jacket cleaned before the meeting.	more informal way of saying that someone else did something for you (it focuses on object not the subject)
Have	[have + object + verb]	Dr. Smith had his nurse take the patient's temperature.	to give someone the responsibility to do something
	[have + person + verb]	I had the hairdresser style my hair for me.	to give someone the responsibility to do something on your behalf

Examples:

- My last supervisor got her editors to be extremely precise.
- My colleague had the two of us take a seminar in time management
- I'll only get you to answer two more questions.
- I think I got you to answer everything.

Learning Points

What-Clauses and Long Noun Phrases as Subjects

What-clauses are used to help us focus on a particular part of the sentence and to emphasise what we want to say by introducing it as a relative clause.

What-clauses are usually linked to the clause that we want to focus on with is or was.

Compare:

What I now need is a new car.

A new car is what I now need.

What I enjoyed most was seeing their new office.

Seeing their new office was what I enjoyed most.

What-clauses are often used with verbs like adore, dislike, enjoy, hate, like, loathe, love, need, prefer, want.

Compare:

What I enjoyed most was seeing their new office.

Seeing their new office was what I enjoyed most.

What-clauses are also often used with does/do/did and when we want to give emphasis to the whole sentence, rather than a particular clause.

Compare:

The manager interviewed all the salespeople first.

What the manager did first was interview all the salespeople

These sentences are useful in writing where we cannot use intonation for emphasis, but they are also often used in speech.

Examples:

- What we do here is often very stressful.
- What I want is a job that is tailored to my competencies and which includes writing and editing.
- What I think is my greatest strength is my writing skills.

